IS HULK HOGAN HEADING TO JAPAN?

Is Hulk Hogan going to Japan? Well of course this wouldn't be anything new for the Hulkster as he is a tremendous star in the Land of the Rising Sun, but this deal would be quite a bit different. Hogan would be heading off into the sunset for good!

It seems that the man who has been the biggest wrestling attraction of all time may be saying goodbye to his American fans for good. It appears that Hulk Hogan, who has dominated the U.S. wrestling scene for the better part of almost ten years will be packing his bags and setting sail for Japan.

It has been reported that Hogan has been offered $100,000 per show with a six show guarantee by Japanese promoter, Antonio Inoki.

Even as you're reading this, the Hulkster could very well be saying "Sayonara" to the W.W.F. and the U.S. wrestling rings. A series of return grudge matches between Hogan-Justice and Hogan—Flair were tentatively scheduled for the late summer/Fall of this year. Indications are now strong that these matches will not be taking place.

One question that rests in the minds of many people in the wrestling business is "Why is Hulk Hogan considering this proposal?"

There are a few reasons:

A) The recent steroid controversy has had an adverse effect on Hulk Hogan's popularity. In fact Hogan is booed in many arenas across the country. In Japan,steroids are not an issue.

B) $100,000 per show for six shows is a very lucrative deal, considering Hogan's current W.W.F. schedule is a lot more hectic. At this stage of the game, the Hulkster is looking to wrestle less and if he can do it for more money, why not?!

C) The Hulkster may have no choice in the matter. Rumor has it that the WWF itself doesn't want any negative personalities with the promotion. Right now, Hogan is quite controversial thanks to the steroid issue, so if the WWF chooses to exercise damage control, Hogan may not have a choice. He'll be forced to go.

If the deal between Hogan and Inoki comes to fruition then the Hulkster would have to say goodbye to the W.W.F. and his fans. Difficult to imagine, isn't it? □

FULL STEA

BY STEVE MUELLER

IN MEMORIAL—World Championship Wrestling (formerly National Wrestling Alliance)1906 -1992 (Date: To be filled in), 1992—The announcement of the sad passing came shortly after midnight in a terse statement released from the executive offices of Turner Broadcasting in Atlanta. In essence, the press release stated that World Championship Wrestling is dead. The promotion had no next of kin.

The above obituary had been prepared back in September, 1991 by the editorial staff of WRESTLING EYE in anticipation of the demise of the World Championship Wrestling promotion. At the time, it appeared there was no chance that WCW would survive because it was suffering through what was perhaps the most degrading and embarrassing circumstances ever experienced by a major pro wrestling promotion in America. WCW's former World Champion, Ric Flair, who never lost the title in the ring and who was still recognized as NWA World Champion by the little active but still existent NWA Board of Governors, was appearing on World Wrestling Federation broadcasts claiming to be the real world champion. To substantiate his claim, Flair was brandishing the NWA world Title belt. Indeed, the same World Championship belt that had become synonymous with WCW and was the centerpiece for the opening graphics of the Sunday "Main Event" program on the Turner Broadcasting System. Now it seems the above obituary will never run. WCW has made an if not miraculous then certainly stunning return from the dead.

The dramatic turnabout began soon after WCW Executive Vice President Jim Herd resigned in early January, 1992, and K. Allen Frey was named to the post. Although Mr. Frey cannot be given full credit for the amazing turnaround in the fortunes of Ted Turner's favorite wrestling promotion, he, and the new positive attitude he has instilled in WCW, are largely responsible. Experts are saying that K. Allen Frey's personal style, his willingness to deal openly with the media, and the promotional and personnel moves he is making may not only elevate WCW to a new level of recognition and acceptance, but do the same for pro wrestling itself. It seems K. Allen Frey intends to replace the World Wrestling Federation as the number one wrestling promotion in America, and it also seems that, for the first time, Ted Turner is solidly backing the attempt.

RETURNING SUPERSTARS

Among the more significant development in the rebirth of this promotion is the return of veterans, Steve Williams and Terry Gordy. Together, these two grappling greats are capable of increasing the talent level of a roster in technical ring skill. Insiders now say that, in part due to the departure of Jim Herd, it is now possible that many other former NWA stars will return to the promotion as well. Cited as possibilities are Jim Cornette, Stan Lane and the Road Warriors.

NEW ADDITIONS

New additions to WCW's talent roster have also impressively increased the promotion's overall skill level. Rick Rude is not only a fine ring worker and an excellent interview segment performer, he has been a major star in the WWF, and thus he gives WCW new credibility. No longer is WCW simply the promotion whose talent gets raided regularly by the WWF. Now WCW is doing the raiding. Even more important in the wrestling scheme of things is the addition of Jesse Ventura to the announcing staff. Jesse, once the WWF's number one commentator, is a legitimate cross-over media star, well known not only for his accomplishments in the mat sport, but as a movie and television star and NFL football announcer. If announcers were wrestlers, Ventura would be Hulk Hogan. He is easily the finest color commentator in the sport. His presence on a broadcast can make a bad show good, and a good show great. Ventura, too, because of his stature in both pro wrestling and in mainstream entertainment vehicles, creates the perception in the minds of fans that WCW is indeed a major league promotion.

TURMOIL IN THE ENEMY CAMP

If there ever was a time for WCW to replace the WWF as America's number one promotion, the time is now. The WWF is in turmoil besieged on all sides by a myriad of frontal assaults. The steroid controversy, especially since the broadcast of ABC television's "20/20" expose segment featuring former WWF Champion Superstar Billy Graham on March 13, has Titan Sports scrambling to defend itself against the charges. Add to that the other recent scandals that have rocked the front office, and the WWF is obviously positioned for a fall from its throne. In fact, if the WWF were a championship boxer, it would be hanging on the ropes, hoping for an eight-count. Of course, the devaluation of Hulk Hogan as a national hero and the chance, still undetermined at the time of this writing, that he will leave the promotion, devastates not only the drawing power but the status of the entire promotion. Picture the WWF without Hulk Hogan. Picture a regional promotion going nowhere fast.

WORLD CHAMPIONSHIP WRESTLING FULL STEAM AHEAD!!!

THE FUTURE IS NOW

In essence K. Allen Frey and the WCW have declared war on the WWF. Frey says, "I am competitive by nature. It is my intention to see WCW replace the WWF as the nation's number one wrestling promotion. "One of the events that Frey will orchestrate in the months ahead is the reestablishment of the National Wrestling Alliance. "WCW continues to be a member of the National Wrestling Alliance," says Frey. And WCW will use that membership to run a number of tournaments that will reestablish NWA titles. This will add luster and significance to WCW title matches, perhaps even an eventual showdown between the NWA World Champion and the WCW World Champion Starcade '92 for the "real" world Championship. Such an event would virtually eliminate the public relations disaster that was Ric Flair appearing on WWF broadcasts with the NWA/WCW world title belt.

Can the WCW actually replace the WWF as America's number one promotion and in the process redefine the criteria for promotional success by featuring competent athletes executing skillful ring moves rather than overmuscled louts who stumble without moving? The opinion of the experts is a resounding yes, but then a word of warning. "This is WCW's moment in time, and it's a moment that will determine the fate of the entire promotion. All involved had better be on their toes to make sure no mistakes are made and all goes smoothly. Then, and only then, does WCW stand a chance of knocking the WWF from their lofty perch."

Another coup for WCW has been the return of some former stars such as Ricky Steamboat and the Great Muta to the promotion. Steamboat, a former NWA World and United States champion, gives the promotion instant credibility because the Dragon remains one of the top all-around performers in the sport. The Great Muta is an international star with magnificent ring ability and a hardcore following. For many of the same reasons, the return of Terry Gordy and Steve Williams will determine all that will come. If WCW does not make it into the national spotlight now, it is over for the promotion for all time. Yes wrestling fans, it's time to sit back once again and see if WCW is successful this time out. Early indications say, YES! □

THE SEARCH FO WARRIOR

BY STEVE MUELLER

It was not long ago that the second most visible wrestler in the WWF, behind only the allegedly "immortal" Hulk Hogan, was the Ultimate Warrior. The Ultimate One's record of accomplishments in the Federation was impressive. He has held the WWF's Intercontinental and World Titles. He has headlined cards in most of America's major sports arenas. In fact, The Warrior even holds a unique place in wrestling history. The Ultimate Warrior is the only man in pro wrestling to hold a 1-0 pinfall advantage in matches over Hulk Hogan. One of the WWF's most poignant moments in WWF history was the conclusion of the Hogan/Warrior match at WrestleMania VI when Hogan handed the championship strap to the Warrior and then faded into the distance as the Ultimate One acknowledged the cheers of the crowd. At the time, it seemed that the torch had been passed, that a new era in wrestling was beginning.

Perhaps even more importantly in the WWF scheme of things, Ultimate Warrior merchandise became one of the promotion's top sellers. Warrior paraphernalia included everything from wristbands to facepaint. Warrior T-shirts were marketed in a variety of styles and fabrics. He appeared in a variety of TV commercials until it seemed that the Warrior was about to join Hogan as the mat sport's only legitimate media crossover star. Why then did the Warrior suddenly, in September, 1991, vanish from the WWF? Was he the victim of foul play? Did some secret alliance of dastardly villains kidnap him? Was he whisked away to some faraway world that is in need of a superhero to vanquish some dark monster? Or was he simply fired?

Casual WWF viewers might think that he was the victim of foul play, of a sinister plot hatched by Paul Bearer, the Undertaker, and biggest WWF turncoat since Sergeant Slaughter, Jake "the Snake" Roberts. Immediately preceding the Warrior's sudden departure, the WWF ran a continuing video segment "mini-series" that featured the Warrior and Roberts in various training sessions concocted by Roberts that were allegedly designed to prepare the Warrior psychologically for battles against the Undertaker, the personification of graveyard nightmares. The fact that the Warrior was already routinely defeating the Undertaker at house shows across America was somehow overlooked by the WWF video storyliners, however that is a subject to address another time.

To capsulate the video drama: Jake the Snake betrayed the Warrior, tricked him into entering a room allegedly filled with poisonous snakes. When the Warrior in the grips of a snake venom delirium crashed through the door to the room, the Undertaker was waiting for him. That was the last WWF fans saw of face painted hero from "parts unknown."

For WWF fans who are waiting for the Snakeman and the Undertaker to be indicted on kidnapping or murder charges, remember what "sports entertainment" promotion you are watching. In reality, the Warrior vanished from the WWF because he was fired by Vince McMahon. Sometime in August, 1991, the Ultimate Warrior decided he wanted to become the Weekend Warrior. He also wanted to be paid more money. A lot more. In essence, his reasoningwas that since he was, in his opinion, almost as valuable to the promotion as Hulk Hogan, he should make almost Hulk Hogan money, and be able to wrestle a Hulk Hogan schedule which is basically two or three appearances a week for about 30 weeks a year. When Vince McMahon first heard the Warrior's demands he laughed. He stopped laughing when he discovered the Warrior was serious. McMahon waited until a few minutes after SummerSlam '91, on which The Warrior was an important promotional ingredient, was finished to fire the Warrior.

In retrospect, the Ultimate Warrior picked a bad time to try to strong arm Titan Sports into a new contract. The steroid controversy was about to break wide open and the Warrior had just been the subject of a sleazy tabloid expose. And even though none of the charges in this particular tabloid, which regularly reports sightings of Martians having dinner with George Bush in the backwoods of Montana, have never been proven, an unwanted, ominous spotlight had been crudely focused on The Warrior.

Since his dismissal from the WWF, reports of the Warrior's whereabouts and his plans for the future have surfaced regularly in wrestling magazines and newsletters and on radio and television talk shows. These reports have been mostly rumor and speculation. Usually they had the Warrior set to debut in WCW at any moment. A hot rumor was that he would appear at Starcade 91. Another hot rumor was that he would debut in WCW at SuperBrawl II and become new champion Sting's first challenger. Neither events occurred.

△ The Ultimate Warrior still has many loyal fans.

△ The Warrior was quite a wrestler.

The facts are that since his WWF departure, the Warrior has been living first in Phoenix, Arizona and then in Albuquerque, New Mexico. He has cut his hair short and is using his given name, James Hellwig, in his new occupation—selling real estate. Recently, the Warrior character resurfaced in the Carolina region on television commercials for Slim Jim beef products. However, these commercials were filmed some two years ago. Rumors about the Warrior's future continue to surface. He is reported to be about to join Joe Weider's bodybuilding group which is locked in mortal combat with Vince McMahon's new World Bodybuilding Federation for control of the bodybuilding world. Others claim that European wrestling promoter Bob Yorey has offered the Warrior a huge deal, $60,000 for 5 matches in Europe. Another report in January, 1992 had The Warrior buying two pairs of wrestling boots from a famous wrestling boot maker. This was taken as a sign that the Warrior was about to return to the ring.

Rumors about a Warrior return to the WWF have, however, ceased. Those rumors ended when Titan Sports began discounting Warrior merchandise. At house shows, items such as $65 Warrior jackets were selling for $16. Everyone takes this a sure sign that the Warrior will never return to Vinceland. However, in pro wrestling the word never should never be used. In any event, wrestling fans, keep watching the skies and the supermarkets. Warrior sightings are becoming as commonplace and popular as Elvis sightings. In fact, a recent report had the Ultimate Warrior having dinner with Elvis in a cafe in San Juan, Puerto Rico at midnight under a full moon.

• By now you all know that the Warrior made his triumphant and unexpected return at Wrestlemania 8. Fans were shocked and surprised but were soon grinning from ear to ear. Welcome back Ultimate, we're sure glad the search is finally over!

Two of the women in these photos take great delight in beating men in wrestling matches. If you think you'd like to try your luck, they'll take you on and you will need . . . LUCK! Laura is 5'10" tall and 180 lbs. Charmaine is 5'8" and 140 lbs. If you do want to wrestle them, they explain "how" in the video. If you just want to watch, it's a lot less painful. As you can see by that guy's face, it's not as much fun as you may think. They're both real strong, especially in the legs, and enjoy squeezing the hell out of men.

LEX LUGER

BY STEVE MUELLER

The rumors began circulating long before Lex Luger lost the WCW World Title to Sting at SuperBrawl II on February 29. The inside word was: "The Total Package is having serious problems with WCW management. He's dissatisfied with his road schedule and the bad effect that tortuous way of life is having on his family life." On at least two occasions, according to WCW insiders, Luger had threatened to quit the promotion. During February, 1992, Luger was absent from all television tapings and house shows. WCW announced that their World Champion was secreted in serious training, preparing for his SuperBrawl II title defense against Sting. In actuality, Luger was near the end of his contract with WCW and had fulfilled his required number of house show appearances. He refused to wrestle any additional dates for the promotion. The contract expired at midnight, March 1, 1992. By 1 A.M., Luger had left WCW. Since then, Luger has been the subject of rumors second in number only to reported Ultimate Warrior sightings.

One rumor has Luger beginning a new career, a career in Hollywood. He is slated, the story goes, to star in multi-million dollar expose/adventure film— "Hulk Hogan— The Real Story." Luger will be portraying Hogan. This rumor has been roundly discounted by both film and wrestling experts. The most prevalent rumor has Luger abandoning his wrestling career for a time, at least, that is, his wrestling career in America. It seems that his WCW contract contained a clause that prohibits him from wrestling for another wrestling promotion in America for one year after the contract expires. Rumors have Luger going to Japan to wrestle until his contractual obligations to WCW expire. However, sources close to Luger say he has no intention of going to Japan for any length of time because that would be contrary to his reason for quitting WCW— wanting to spend more time with his family. Another story making the rounds, and this one has some real credibility, has Luger beginning a career in bodybuilding. Some WWF insiders claim that Luger will soon make his debut as a professional bodybuilder in Vince McMahon's relatively new and financially unstable World Bodybuilding Federation. Luger will do this, the insiders claim, for a year. Then he will debut in the WWF as the next heir apparent to the throne of Hulkamania.

However, when March, 1993 rolls around, replacing Hulk Hogan may not be a desirable occupation. In fact, because of some potentially devastating lawsuits now making their way through the court system, there is some question whether the WWF will even exist then, at least in its present form. If these court cases, cause advertisers and sponsors to withdraw from WWF programming, the promotion may indeed have trouble maintaining a national persona. It is said that the WWF's current unfortunate situation has caused Luger to rethink his position and his options. Luger, sources close to him report, has started to wonder if he blundered badly when he decided to quit WCW, especially since that promotion seems to be making a dramatic comeback since K. Allen Frey replaced Jim Herd as Executive Vice President. (See the story elsewhere in this issue.)

△ Lex has the tool to match Hogan's accomplishments.

To Luger's advantage, he burned no bridges when he left WCW. In fact, he seems to still have the option of returning to WCW if he decides that entering the WWF is not a good career move. K. Allen Frey, has already publicly stated that he harbors no hard feelings against Luger. As long as Luger is not under contract to anyone else or to another promotion, Frey would be willing to discuss the Total Package's return to WCW. "WCW has always been quite satisfied with Lex Luger's work in the ring," says Frey.

Where does all this leave Luger? Experts say that despite the WWF's current problems, Luger's best bet may still be joining the WWF. It is clear that Hulk Hogan's days as a major wrestling attraction are coming to a close. In fact, by the time you read this, Hogan may have already left the WWF to finish his career in Japan. No one currently under contract to Titan Sports seems capable of replacing Hogan on a long term basis.

CAN HE FILL HOGAN'S SHOES?

◁ This man could do very well in the body building world.

LEX LUGER

△ Hulk's wrestling days are numbered.

It appeared, for a time, that Sid Justice/Vicious would be Hogan's successor, but some members of the WWF booking team feel Sid may be too injury prone to follow the difficult road schedule a WWF champion, other than Hulk Hogan, must follow. Both Roddy Piper and Randy Savage, while still top wrestling attractions, are probably too old to become long term champions. Ric Flair, too, while having performed admirably as WWF champ, is not the answer for the long haul. The Ultimate Warrior is, of course, still lost in space.

Lex Luger will be about thirty three years old when he is eligible to join the WWF. He will just be entering his wrestling prime. In WCW, he has proven to be a durable and competent ring performer and his interview technique has improved dramatically over the last couple of years. While not overly charismatic, he does command a crowd's attention. Under Vince McMahon's capable character direction, Luger could be developed into a marketable wrestling personality, the final test of success in the WWF. Still, could he become a top drawing card? He has never been a monster fan attraction. Will his huge physique work against him in the coming era of more athletically sized grapplers? Perhaps. As is usually the case in pro wrestling, the only thing certain about Lex Luger's future is that nothing is certain. The wrestling world is changing rapidly and so too may be Luger's place in it. For now, there is just no long term answer. □

FROM BLOOD THIRSTY T

BY HOWARD FEINTUCH

The Bushwackers have not always been the same lovable and zany team that they are today. Their history is filled with blood and pain and it was not too long ago that this seemingly harmless tag team were one of the most hated duos in all of wrestling. Of course, all this happened when these two New Zealanders wrestled under a different name in a different decade, for a different promotion, but that is not the point. Opponents of Luke Miller and Butch Williams must never forget that these guys are capable of doing almost anything to garner a win and may very well one day return back to their savage ways. Sure, today, the Bushwackers reign as one of the most beloved teams in the World Wrestling Federation, but remember, the are definitely not your typical wrestlers.

Luke and Butch were international wrestling stars well before their debut in the WWF. They once claimed to have held world titles in thirteen different countries. WWF fans of today would be shocked and dismayed if they saw this duo's old matches. They are nothing like they are today and in fact, one could justifiably say that The Bushwackers as we now know them never existed before their WWF debut. Luke Williams and Butch Miller were originally billed as The Sheepherders and they first started to garner national attention while competing in the old UWF area.

The New Zealand duo had a thirst for blood and showed no mercy in going after opponents. They were not satisfied until they had delivered a severe beating and almost maimed their foes. The matches in which The Bushwackers appeared were all-out brawls and slugfests. Perhaps one of their more famous feuds while in this area took place against The Guerrero Brothers. These two teams battled brutally and wickedly. Eventually, much blood was shed by both teams before they each went their separate ways.

O PLAIN CRAZY!!

In the old days, Butch and Luke were very proud of The New Zealand flag. They carried it proudly to the ring before every match. In fact, they held their flag in such high esteem that they recruited as a flag bearer a promising wrestler named Johnny Ace (who later became a member of the Dynamic Dudes tag team). Ace faithfully carried the prized flag during matches and waved it with intense pride. He believed in The Sheepherders and was honored to be a part of their success. Ace felt that his future was tied with Williams and Miller and promised to serve them faithfully. Alas, he was in for a rude awakening.

After The Sheepherders and Johnny Ace entered WCW, Ace finally realized that the dastardly duo were using him and truly were not his friends. Ace didn't know what to do to rectify the situation but after he accidentally caused them to lose a match, the decision was made for him. Luke and Butch violently turned on Ace and beat their flag-bearer to a bloody pulp. They quickly realized they needed a new flag bearer and decided to pick a fellow New Zealander this time around. No American wrestler could be trusted, they surmised. They finally settled on Rip Morgan, a burly newcomer who was more than willing to get physically involved in matches. Rip Morgan thought he had a brilliant career ahead of him with The Sheepherders, but the WWF beckoned shortly thereafter and Luke and Butch ran, without ever looking back.

When the duo arrived in the Federation, they became known as The Bushwackers. Yes, this team not only had changed their name, they changed their rulebreaking ways as well. The Bushwackers were now catering to the fans. Their anti-American attitude was gone and their crazy sides emerged. Many critics felt this was just a ploy to gain the trust of the fans and advance their own careers but now, several years later, the wild duo are still fan favorites and show no signs of going back to their old ways.

The Bushwackers evoke a great crowd response. Go to any arena and watch the reaction of the fans when Luke and Butch appear. They are laughing and cheering wildly and doing "the Bushwacker dance". Yes, this team has got the fans solidly behind them and seem to be loving every minute. The fans in turn, never know what unorthodox moves their two loonies will pull next and are rarely disappointed. Recently, The Bushwackers have been facing The Beverly Brothers across the country and the two rich boys have been having a hard time sticking to their game plan because Luke and Butch are so confusing with their unusual ring antics.

Do not expect a Bushwacker match to be fast paced, high flying or very technical in nature. Much of their time is spent stalling, as the popular duo entertains the fans with their humorous antics such as licking each other's heads and mocking their opponents.

If the success of a tag team was measured by their win-loss record, The Bushwackers would be considered by many to be failures, but nothing could be further from the truth. By getting the fans involved in their matches and imitating their opponents' every move, Luke and Butch have proved to the WWF brass that they are worthy of a spot in the competitive promotion, regardless of how often they pin their opponents shoulders to the mat. In short, they are entertaining, fun to watch and add a whole new dimension to wrestling, as most fans know it.

Although Luke and Butch have fared better competitively in other promotions, the WWF is the place that has made them famous. Chances are better that they will be remembered as a zany, fun loving duo, rather than the sadistic and cold-hearted tag team from days gone by.

True, purists may scoff at The Bushwackers and their lack of displayed wrestling skills in the ring, but these two guys have plenty going for them as well. The Bushwackers have a charm and charisma that is all their own and have done pretty well for themselves in the sport of wrestling. They certainly have a sentimental place in the hearts of fans all over the world. So guys, keep doing exactly what you're doing, we love ya!!! □

STER

Many wrestlers just naturally have great bods!

BY STEVE MUELLER

By now, even casual wrestling fans are aware of the steroid scandal that, along with other legal action currently working its devastating way through the court system, is threatening to destroy America's number one wrestling promotion, the World Wrestling Federation. And almost universally, wrestling fans, critics, and journalists of all persuasions are condemning the WWF for allegedly allowing itself to become the steroid capital of the sports world. Fans are reacting to news stories from such diverse sources as ABC television's 20/20, the Los Angeles Times, the New York Post, and pro wrestling magazines and newsletters that describe steroid abuse in the WWF. The situation has become so bad that large numbers of fans have turned against Hulk Hogan, arguably once the most charismatic and popular superstar ever to step into the squared circle. Now a large portion of the audience is booing the Hulkster as though he were the second coming of Killer Kowalski. In fact, at arena shows, many fans lustily boo the Hogan name when it is announced on upcoming cards.

Since the story of alleged widespread steroid abuse in pro wrestling broke, the use of the muscle enhancing drug has been compared to such antisocial activities as genocide and cannibalism. Indeed, steroid users have been linked with the most notorious and dastardly characters in history, characters as sinister as Count Dracula and as disreputable as Benedict Arnold. The drug itself, in its varied forms, has been called the greatest destroyer of the human body since the Black Plague. However, before you join the ranks of those demanding the end of the WWF, demanding that the heads of Vince McMahon and Hulk Hogan be delivered in recyclable plastic bags to the leaders of some self-righteous organization composed of concerned and bitter citizens with an agenda to rid the world of not only steroids, but of professional wrestling, loud conversations and anything else they deem not up to their own perceived level of cultural appreciation, remember there is another side to this issue. But before that other side is examined, let's look at the leaders of the anti-WWF movement.

Those who are condemning the WWF in general and Hulk Hogan in particular most loudly fall into two categories. One is made up by former WWF wrestlers; the other by longtime WWF critics who have been waiting for an issue with the explosive potential to destroy the McMahon Empire. This second group is a strange one, composed of a variety of bitter characters ranging from critics who want wrestling abolished to hardcore fans with a gripe against the WWF's style of wrestling.

OIDS

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE COIN

FORMER WRESTLING STARS

Two former WWF World Champions are leading the steroid based frontal assault on the World Wrestling Federation. On the surface, both Bruno Sammartino and Superstar Billy Graham appear to have legitimate, if diverse, gripes and opinions concerning the WWF's role in the steroid use and abuse question.

Physiques can be achieved without using artificial methods.

Bruno Sammartino, two-time WWF World Champion and the mat sport's legitimate "Living Legend" has said on more than one occasion, "The WWF is a bastardization of the wrestling business. It's a doggone disgrace." Bruno is also a longtime campaigner against steroid abuse and was one of the first to claim that 90 percent of WWF wrestlers were on steroids. He claims to never have used any kind of drug. However, although Bruno is generally considered one of the most honorable men ever to step into a wrestling ring, his credibility as a critic of the WWF is suspect. Long after Vince McMahon Jr. assumed control of the promotion, an event Bruno calls the beginning of the "bastardization of the wrestling business", Bruno continued to draw a paycheck, both as an announcer and as a wrestler, from the promotion. One has to wonder, "If things are so bad in the WWF, why didn't Bruno say something sooner?" Like when he was still an active participant in the wrestling business.

Superstar Billy Graham has spearheaded the anti-steroid, anti-Hulk Hogan crusade. Graham's personal steroid story is terribly sad. The wrestler who has been called the prototype for the Hulk Hogan character is a virtual cripple. Details of his afflictions have been chronicled at length in this publication. Graham blames his physical problems on the disabling side effects of steroid abuse. He says that he used steroids because "to be successful in pro wrestling I had to have a physique that could only be achieved through the use of steroids." Most everyone of a fair mind agrees that such a standard for success is sinister, unfair, and should not exist. And wrestling experts, while pointing out that steroid use to enhance muscle size has only been illegal since 1988, generally agree with Graham's observations.

It is, however, his criticism of Hulk Hogan that raises some serious questions. Essentially, the Superstar has criticized Hogan for not "coming clean and admitting steroid use." Graham is particularly incensed that Hogan said on the Arsenio Hall television program that he had used steroids on only three occasions, and always to correct a medical problem. Hogan's claim should not be the central question. Indeed, whether Hulk Hogan has abused steroids or not is not the real question.

The question is, if Hogan has abused the drug, why is it necessary that he admit it? Should he be expected to ruin his career, especially if he is no longer using the drug? After all, if Hogan was using steroids before 1988, he was violating no law. A growing opinion among wrestling insiders is that Hogan is being made a scapegoat.

THE REBEL ALLIANCE

On the front line of any march against Titan Towers in Connecticut would be a strange mix of wrestling haters and WWF bashers. These apparent natural enemies, anti-wrestling critics and hardcore fans, have joined together in a deadly alliance to oppose the hated McMahon empire with as much fervor as Luke Skywalker and the Rebel Alliance exhibited in their battle against Darth Vader and his dark Empire. Marching in this surreal parade are long time wrestling bashers and hardcore wrestling fans who have long detested the WWF's style of wrestling which ranks charisma and personality above mat technique and ring skill. It seems that while hardcore purists are enjoying the frontal assault on the WWF, they do not realize that if Vinceland falls, the next target may very well be all pro wrestling in America. To wrestling fans, joining or applauding this campaign is like taking poison to cure a cold. The anti-steroid stand of hardcore fans would be better served when removed from the self-serving environment of professional critics.

WWF TAKES ACTION

Since the steroid story broke wide open at the trial of former WWF ringside physician George Zahorian, Titan Sports has taken steps to eliminate the problem. They have instituted a policy of testing all wrestlers in their promotion for steroid use. And while some critics claim the testing policy is just cosmetic, there is hard evidence that it is not. As of this writing, a number of WWF wrestlers have been suspended or dismissed for steroid use. Among them are some who have been top attractions in the promotion.

THE OTHER SIDE

There are some, though their numbers are shrinking rapidly, who claim that steroid use should not be prohibited. These folks, among them some leading sports figures, claim that it is not steroid use that is causing problems, but rather it is the abuse of steroids. These proponents claim that when steroids are taken as part of a medically supervised program of exercise and conditioning, there are no ill effects from use of the drug. Cited as proof are sports figures, such as Arnold Schwarzenegger, who have admitted steroid use but who exhibit no ill effects. There are others who claim the WWF cannot be blamed for popularizing the steroid look. If fans were not receptive to this look, if fans did not demand that their superheroes look this way, the WWF would have no reason to push large, over-muscled athletes. The WWF, it is claimed, was only responding to the demand of its fans who want to watch wrestlers in the ring who look like visitors from a comic book world of dinosaur muscled superheroes.

CONCLUSIONS

It appears that, in time, the steroid controversy will fade. Both the WWF and WCW are taking steps to make sure their wrestling stars will not be accused of steroid abuse. Most wrestling experts are saying that the era of the over-muscled super hero type of wrestler is over. They claim that the stars of tomorrow will be athletically built competitors capable of performing effective ring moves. Finally, wrestling fans, there is a need for caution. America is still a country where guilt must be proven. Just because a wrestler is large and heavily muscled does not necessarily mean he uses steroids. Be careful about jumping on bandwagons. Anti-steroid crusaders might just be anti-wrestling bashers. And if you do jump on that bandwagon, be careful who you stand next to. It might not be pleasant when the ride is finished. □

LEARN THE RULES... OF THE EUROPEAN

△"Bull Power" Leon White dominates Rambo during a championship match in Germany.

BY ROB "THE STEAM HAMMER" EDLHAUSER

Fans scatter. Chairs are turned over. People hold their loved ones for dear life. The hot blooded gladiator staggers through the crowd to inflict more punishment on his opponent. Blood flows, as one of the two participants in this street fight has his head lacerated with the butt of a steel chair. In the fifth row of the arena's audience, the "Irish Ring Fox" Dave Finlay delivers a bone crunching piledriver on his hapless opponent. Finlay returns to the confines of the locker room area after defeating the Canadian high flyer, Chris Benoit.

No, this isn't Madison Square Garden, The Philadelphia Spectrum or Atlanta's Omni. This tale is but one bloody chapter written in the record book of European Pro Wrestling. This particular battle between Finlay and Benoit is just one of the many brutal and violent confrontations staged all over Europe. This time the savagery was witnessed at Vienna, Austria's Heumarkt (or Hay market) at the annual open air tournament. Tournaments like this can last sometimes for forty two days! Yes, wrestling in Europe is quite a bit different from our American standards.

Wrestling's popularity in Europe has skyrocketed recently. More and more American wrestlers have journeyed there to test their skills against that continent's finest. The "hotbed" of European wrestling is clearly the Germany—Austria region, although "live" wrestling can be seen in just about any part of Europe including Spain, France, England, Switzerland, Belgium, Scotland, Ireland and Greece. The crowds at these matches range from a few dozen fans to a sold out 15,000 that most recently packed Bremen City Hall in Germany for the first European Clash Of The Champions.

With wrestling's soaring popularity in Europe, let's take a closer, in depth look at this stylish new phenomenon called "Catch" (or in English, wrestling).

WRESTLING GAME

Q—Where are the majority of wrestling matches held?

Big promotions have their annual tournaments in big cities like Graz, Vienna, Hannover, Dortmund, and Bremen. Smaller leagues can be found at fairs and festivals where the matches are held under the "big top". European tours of American promotions like that of WCW, the WWF, or smaller organizations like the WWS utilize large arenas with the capacity of 10,000 or more. In Europe, most of the actual wrestling rings are different than those used in the United States. Many rings in Europe are just boxing rings which provide no spring to absorb a fall. Weak ring ropes are also a liability and this prevents wrestlers like Chris Benoit or Owen Hart from doing many of their high flying maneuvers. Wrestlers who have attempted high risk moves have ended up in a hospital bed because of this technicality. Also, the tournaments are held in open air arenas where inclement weather is always a threat.

Q—Who attends pro wrestling matches?

The sport has lost much respect in the past. Many feel that wrestling is too brutal for children and too childish for adults.

LEARN THE RULES...
OF THE EUROPEAN WRESTLING GAME

A handful of hard-core "tell it like it is" wrestling maniacs keep this sport alive.

Q—What are the rules of a European match?

The rules would definitely be the death of any American promotion. In fact Verne Gagne proved this when he experimented with these rules for his now defunct AWA.

Matches are decided with a points system. The disqualification rules are enforced by displaying red and yellow cards. In England, rulebreakers receive a first and second public warning before getting disqualified. England also uses the "round system" like in boxing with five minute rounds and one minute rest periods. This has become quite boring at times for most fans.

Some specific rules include:

A) No foul play. Use of foreign objects, eye gouging, groin shots and closed fists are grounds for disqualification.

B) It is illegal to throw an opponent over the tope. It is also illegal to attack an opponent that is down on the canvas unless of course, you are exercising some kind of hold. If a wrestler is knocked out then the referee puts a ten count on him. In this case, the opponent must wait in a neutral corner for his adversary to gain consciousness and get to his feet. If the wrestler cannot beat the count, then the wrestler standing in the neutral corner is declared the winner. Of course, if the opposing wrestler breaks the ref's count then that could be grounds for disqualification.

C) A tournament final or a match to determine number one contendership must have a clear, undisputed decision. If such a match ends with no falls after five rounds, an additional sixth one is added. If this round should have no pin, the match changes into a "sudden death" affair, where the wrestler with the most points within a certain time limit, usually ten minutes, wins. A point is determined with every move used to take an opponent to the mat.

Q—What promotions are operating in Europe?

There are many promotions on the continent. One of the largest, the CWA (Catch Wrestling Alliance) was founded two decades ago by it's now co-promoter, Otto Wanz. The CWA's first champion, the great Canadian Don Leo Jonathan was crowned in South Africa. The title became a European version of a world title, but it is only defended in major cities like Graz, Vienna and Bremen.

The Austrian Wrestling Association (AWA) is owned by one of big Otto's competitors, Klaus Wallas. Klaus formed the AWA when he left the CWA. Originally, before Otto Wanz, a man named George Blemenschytz ruled the European wrestling scene for decades. When he retired in the 1970's he was undecided on who to give his promotion to, Wanz or Wallas.

Wanz gained control and Wallas formed his own group with wrestlers from Austria as well as Germany and Liechtenstein. AWA cards are held seasonally at small villages in the countryside of Austria.

The Swiss based organization, the European Wrestling Federation (EWF) promotes in France, Spain and Portugal. This promotion is one of the few that features women's wrestling. This league has a one hour television show called "New Catch" on the highly popular television cable channel, Eurosport.

The British Wrestling Federation (BWF) operates all over the British Isles and lends their wrestlers to other promotions like the EWF or the CWA as well. The BWF recently booked the preliminary matches for the recent WWF United Kingdom Rampage Tour.

Unlike the U.S., most promotions in Europe work together, and try to help each other out. They don't refuse to acknowledge the other's existence and seek to monopolize the sport. Sadly, many are predicting that this will change and the Europeans will eventually follow the path of American promotions. □

BOB BACKLUND

Backlund and Funk mix it up.

BY GIL EDWARDS
PHOTOS BY IAN SCHULTZ

Whether you're dealing with an entire team or as in wrestling, on an individual basis, a home field advantage can make or break the players. Feeling comfortable and confident is of the utmost importance to any athlete. Former World Heavyweight Champion Bob Backlund, now traveling the comeback trail feels most comfortable with the WWA and thus, it's the only promotion that he wrestles for.

Yes, the former World Wrestling Federation champion is excited about returning to the ring from a self-imposed exile for the past seven years. According to Backlund there's much to clean up in the sport and he's now dedicating his life to doing just that. Backlund, who is a volunteer coach for the Bacon Academy wrestling team has spoken often and loudly about what he labels as the injustices taking place in the mat game today and vows to correct them.

The magic in Bob's ring work remains fluent, even though he's past age 40. The high hip-tosses executed and his dropkick that connects precisely on target, are quite successful, even though these moves are, by today's standards, considered "no frills" mat action. Backlund is a wrestling machine and always manages to remain on the offensive. Unless knocked out cold, the chances of scoring a pinfall or submission at Bob's expense are minute, at best.

What has Bob relaxed about picking up his pro career again is the promotional deal he struck with the WWA. He couldn't be more pleased with what has transpired with co-promoters Dennis Coraluzzo and Larry Sharpe (a former foe during Bob's title years). There have been no agents nor attorneys necessary during negotiations. For Backlund, a handshake has been as good as money in the bank.

Signing contracts before match time is merely a formality for all the parties concerned, for sponsorship and insurance technicalities. "Trust is the most important factor between my partner and me, with Bob," Coraluzzo explained. "We all enjoy a healthy working relationship, and this is good not only for us, but the fans of the WWA as well."

WWA fans were pleased to see that Backlund hadn't changed his ring style much. The former champ's first outing for the promotion took place last summer place at the Camden Community College gymnasium in New Jersey, and Terry Funk was Bob's competition. The toughest challenge that hot, muggy evening in 1991 was not to give in to the sweltering heat and humidity surrounding the region. Incredibly, both athletes blocked out the stifling conditions. The former WWF champion was taking the first step of his historic return to the sport with a plan, and no obstacles outside of the ring would have any bearing on his performance.

Backlund had agreed to meet Funk because he wanted to, not because he had to. Backlund always watched his pennies, from the time he took the WWF championship on Feb 20, 1978 from "Superstar" Billy Graham to the time his manager, Arnold Skaaland mysteriously threw in the towel, spelling defeat for Backlund at the hands of The Iron Sheik on December 26, 1983. During the nearly six years that he was on top of the heavyweight mountain, Bob earned in excess of $200,000 dollars annually. The real reason Bob agreed to the WWA's match was because he still wants to prove to himself that he can still rumble fairly with the best among the independents today, despite his time off.

Secondly, the former symbol of supremacy in the WWF is out to show all that a wrestler with no gimmick, painted face or sleazy looking valet hanging on his arm can succeed, given today's market being what it is. Yes, Bob is quite pleased with his accomplishments thus far.

Before Backlund met and defeated Terry Funk, he accepted a challenge by former arch rival Ivan Koloff on the Universal Wrestling Federation's BEACH BRAWL card in Palmetto, Florida. It took all but three minutes for Bob to pin his Russian counterpart. What an incredible way to get reacquainted with wrestling! After this match he toyed with the idea of making a gradual comeback, but Bob still needed more convincing to lace up his boots again on a regular basis.

The WWA tipped Backlund's decision to hit the ring once again, after he learned of their high morals in presenting their product to the public. The mixture of talent available to him as possible opponents was far too enticing to pass up. From Koloff's power to Funk's total unpredictability anywhere in an arena, Bob was eager to test uncharted waters. With that in mind, he wasn't disappointed when Terry attempted to utilize everything that wasn't nailed down, including tables and chairs to get the upper hand.

Backlund found a weak link in his opponent's attack, took advantage of the moment and bridged Funk for the three count. With the victory over Terry Funk, Bob was eagerly awaiting his next set of WWA bookings. Next up was a clash with Jerry "The King" Lawler in Drexel Hill, Pennsylvania on January 10, 1992. With Lawler wrestling full-time for more than two decades mainly in the Southern states, he seemed to be a more tenacious opponent than both Funk and Koloff were.

Lawler was quicker than the Russian and shrewder than Funk and he was used to winning. However, his hand was not raised in victory when he met Backlund. Bob was just too tough to beat. Koloff, Funk and now Lawler fell victim to the scientific skills of Bob Backlund. Who's next, you wonder?

Less than twenty four hours after dethroning "The King", Bob found himself facing "Dirty" Dick Murdoch in Clementon, New Jersey. Murdoch, like Funk, does not have a set pattern of attack, and figured he could easily overpower the former WWF kingpin. True, "Dirty" Dick did remain inside the squared circle throughout the contest, but he simply could not muster enough strength for the win. Murdoch, who was a touring pro before Backlund graduated junior high school became Bob's next victim in the WWA. Four matches, four wins. The champ is certainly on a roll.

Both Coraluzzo and Sharpe show no favoritism towards Backlund when picking his opponents. They are fair and try to present matches they feel the fans will want to see. The WWA heavyweight title is a real possibility for Bob, if he hasn't gooten it by the time you read this. Be it with WWA local products "Boy Gone Bad" Joe Daniels, The Golden Phoenix or The Spider, as well as globetrotting ring greats like Stan Hansen and Cowboy Bob Orton waiting in the wings for their opportunity at the former WWF champ, there will be no side-stepping of any challenges made. Bob Backlund is in full control to take his comeback to whatever level pleases him. His report card thus far remains stocked with A's, but then again on the mat, Bob has always been an honor student. □

Hurray! The movement finally appears to be receiving the promotional commitment that a growing segment of the wrestling public feels is long overdue, yet it remains an uphill battle for the sport's light heavyweight division in America to establish its worthiness.

If you think bigger, as in 250 to 300 pounds is indeed automatically better than the "little guys", wrestling-wise, you may very well be singing a very different tune after the next couple of months. There are at least a half dozen outstanding light heavyweights currently planting the seeds of credibility in their craft that hopefully will balloon through every promotion.

No Japan bashing here, please. Until a solid foundation is established Stateside with a well stocked light heavyweight class, the top competitors at that level remain in the Orient. At 5'4" and 210 pounds, Jushin "Thunder" Liger is the most famous, among dozens of the light heavyweights currently accepting bookings. At this stage of his career, he rivals the level of public recognition of Japanese wrestling immortals like Giant Baba and Antonio Inoki.

Liger has earned great fan support by working his tail off in between the ring ropes. He doesn't simply want to just get by. He is out to prove to the public that face-painting, steroid injections and snarling are not the only requirements needed to make it in the grappling game.

Weight should be irrelevant to a competitor's mental outlook. If an athlete remains confident in his ability and keeps himself in peak physical condition, there should be no reason for him not to succeed on merit alone. Since the second half of 1991 in America, the light heavyweights have seized opportunities to demonstrate under match conditions just how badly they want to prove that a portion of the sport's spotlight belongs to them. The Global Wrestling Federation was the first promotion to really believe in and allow the light heavyweights to get their foot in wrestling's front door of opportunity.

△ Jerry Lynn has been making quite a name for himself.

Now, with the influx of enormously skilled athletes like "Flying" Brian Pillman, Barry Horowitz, Chaz, Sabu, Jerry Lynn and The Lightning Kid, the foot has been removed and the doorway of opportunity is slowly widening. When the GWF was born in 1991, a light heavyweight tournament was immediately given the same promotional importance as the North American and Television titles. The Lightning Kid worked his magic in the ring defying the laws of gravity and became the first GWF light heavyweight champ.

Jerry Lynn, who is still The Kid's chief adversary, also garners much public attention when he attacks the Kid with a vengeance. Call it a coincidence or just a smart business decision, but by Oct 1991, WCW created their own light heavyweight division. "Flying" Brian pinned Ricky Morton on the Halloween Havoc card in Chicago to be declared the first champ.

Still, the GWF pushes this weight class with more commitment than any other rival promotion. As added proof to just how hotly competitive the GWF light heavyweight division remains, the title once again changed hands on February 7, 1992. Barry "The Winner" Horowitz won the title. He had substantial assistance at ringside when his manager, Bruce Pritchard held Jerry Lynn's feet on the canvas during the three count, but hey, interference is a common occurrence in wrestling.

The dark horse among the light heavyweights in the Southwest is Chaz, the son of super heavyweight, Tug Taylor. Yes, Chaz has even had the GWF belt placed around his waist, too. He is a top notch performer who has a tremendous amount of ability and never disappoints. Watch out for Chaz in the future.

Among all the light heavyweights, Brian Pillman is the most publicly known due to his appearing on televised World Championship Wrestling cards. However, it remains a mystery as to why the organization hasn't imported available light heavyweight challengers to bring about four star rated encounters with their champion. The list of free-agents is astounding.

England's Dave "Fit" Finlay, Mexico's El Gran Hamada and David Sammartino, all would surely give Pillman a tough workout, once the timekeeper's bell sounded. When studying WCW's treatment of their newly created weight class of competition, if their light heavyweight champ did indeed receive the attention he deserved, his energetic work rate could embarrass many of the top heavyweights around which they've built their promotion.

At the opposite end of the promotional wrestling spectrum, the independents seem to have become at ease in recognizing the light heavyweights' right to professionally exist. In the Boston based International Wrestling Federation, two light heavy contenders, Bill Wilcox and "Iron Horse" Perry Saturn are rapidly becoming the topic of choice among mat fans throughout New England. With the right breaks, these two may be main eventing in Mexico or Germany.

What a mystery Sabu the Elephant Boy remains! As hard as some of you may find it to accept as fact, he truly was trained for this game by his infamous uncle—The Original Sheik! You may be wondering how this is possible since the most athletic moves The Sheik has displayed in years has been switching the pencil he uses to dig open the flesh on his opponents' forehead from hand to hand. Sabu is quite the opposite. He has already appeared twice for Japan's Frontier Martial Arts/ Wrestling Promotion. The continuous flurry of forearms he dishes out to slow down his opposition allows him to freely execute his most reliable moves.

Sabu darts off the ring ropes as if they were extra-strength, jumbo rubber bands and delivers flying body blocks and diving headbutts to his stunned opponents. He is often accused of spending as much time in the air as Superman, and this 215 pound Lansing, Michigan resident is the sport's

"diamond in the rough" waiting to be discovered. However, as talented as Sabu is, many fans wonder if WCW is capable of swallowing their pride by not only acknowledging athletes outside of their organizational boundaries, but one that presents a danger by upstaging their own light world heavyweight champ.

Jeff Jarrett can also make a strong case as to why WCW and the GWF leaders continue to overlook his abilities in the ring. At 225 pounds soaking wet, the United States Wrestling Association star has proven he could trade holds with the most seasoned of veterans. He's less flashy in his ring conduct than The Lightning Kid or Chaz, but when it comes to taking care of business flat on his feet, Jeff is just as lethal.

Forget kicking around the idea of unifying the heavyweight contenders on U.S. soil for the time being. At this time, the freshness and acrobatic mannerisms of the light heavyweights is shaping up to be more thrilling. Just imagine this for a line-up: Horowitz versus Jarrett, The Lightning Kid opposing Sabu, Chaz and Pillman clashing, and Jerry Lynn colliding with Billy Joe Travis. That would be some card to see!

Hey, let's take this dream card a giant step further by petitioning it to be a pay-per-view extravaganza. A long shot, maybe but remember what the New York Mets baseball team did in 1969. Keep the faith, light heavyweight matches are here to stay! □

He's taken a licking and yet he keeps on ticking. Tony Atlas still has plenty left on his wrestling agenda and he's not yet ready to look for a new trade. He's experienced plenty of ups and downs in the ring during the last fifteen years, yet he's still ready for much more. The major promotions should take notice of his availability and book him on upcoming cards as many fans demand. Need more convincing? Alright, let's review his resume.

Tony has a tremendous sense of determination to prove to his critics that he's not "over the hill". Forget about all the what ifs and maybes—Tony Atlas has paid his dues by hanging tough with the independents in between stints with the World Wrestling Federation for the better part of the past eight years.

◁ Atlas is the current IWCCW champ.

His 6'3", 260 pound sculptured body has collided with the best the sport has to offer and he's still around while a majority of those worthy challengers and champions have long since departed from wrestling.

Atlas, of Roanoke, Virginia says without hesitation that when he and Rocky Johnson captured the WWF tag team titles on November 15, 1983 in Allentown, Pennsylvania from The Samoans remains the proudest moment of his ring career. As co-holder of the tag belts with Rocky, they defended the championship for five months before relinquishing their status in tag competition to Dick Murdoch and the late Adrian Adonis. Most importantly, Tony proved that he was an all-pro, a superstar who was deserving of special attention by American promotions.

Besides proving himself as a tremendous athlete and an outstanding bodybuilder, when Tony "Mr. USA" Atlas climbs in to the ring he demonstrates that his muscles are more than just show. Which promotion then is the best to showcase his talents? Well, the WWF is at this time declared totally out of bounds because they (WWF) stripped him of his dignity and publicly took away all that he had worked hard to achieve, since his debut in 1977. Upon accepting the Federation's offer to work for them in 1990, it was "see ya" to Tony Atlas, hello to Saba Simba.

In essence, Atlas was portrayed as a man who allegedly re-discovered his African roots—minus the respect. Instead, like many others who enter the WWF with high hopes, Atlas was transformed into a human cartoon. Of course the gimmick flopped, after all, who would believe it? It seems that the only other alternative for Tony Atlas is to join the newly transformed WCW.

Since putting the idea of Saba Simba to rest deeper in the ground than The Undertaker could, Tony has traveled up and down the East Coast from his home near Lewiston, Maine for the independents. He is in top notch condition and keeps his nose clean by not getting near anything or anyone controversial. It's a pretty safe bet that with WCW, Atlas would be allowed to conduct himself in the ring according to how he would feel most comfortable.

Big, bad and bold sums up Tony's attitude these days. Upon signing a contract with WCW, Atlas would have to immediately be considered a contender for all three of the promotion's singles titles. It would also be one of the most intelligent moves maneuvered by the Dangerous Alliance to welcome "Mr. USA" into their elite group with open arms. Member Arn Anderson is called The Enforcer, surely Atlas has the qualifications to be the judge, jury and executioner of the best WCW matchmakers could send before him. Should Tony become one of manager Paul E. Dangerously's roughhousing recruits, there's an excellent chance that he would add another prestigious title to the Alliance's current collection.

There's compromise in every worthwhile situation. The main thing for Tony to consider that WCW will give him national exposure. Tony, who has always been generous and kind to others throughout his career, may need to rethink his priorities. The time has come for Atlas to think of himself first and garner a "me, me, me" attitude. Sure, he's always been a favorite but he may have to go after either Dustin Rhodes' TV title or even Sting's heavyweight gold if he wants to keep his name fresh in the mind of the fans.

Atlas may also do well by issuing a challenge to the largest athlete with WCW, 7'7" El Gigante. Going toe-to-toe with the biggest and best the sport has had to offer over the years has been routine for Tony, so he should not back away from this latest challenge. After all he has put the hurt on Hulk Hogan, Black Jack Mulligan and Andre the Giant in the past.

The WCW has recently put The Junkyard Dog, Greg Valentine and color commentator, Jesse Ventura on the payroll, so why couldn't they use Tony Atlas as well? Has the point been overlooked that management can be afraid of a man they may not be able to control? After all, Tony comes and goes and does what he pleases. In the past year he has competed in Germany, Spain and Switzerland, and has clobbered crafty mat men like Nikolai Volkoff, S.D. Jones and Kamala. Still, his thirst for victory at the highest level hasn't been quenched, not by a long shot.

Tony is still in his prime and can mix it up with the best of them. He still keeps his foes baffled by mixing his holds up. During a recent show in Connecticut, Atlas executed a dropkick off the top turnbuckle connecting with Dino Bravo's chest. This caused the Frenchman to flip backwards, snapping his head on the canvas. The force of the move left Bravo flat on his back for the pin.

If Tony joins WCW, the possibilities for matches are endless. Imagine pitting Atlas's 22" biceps against Johnny B. Badd's lightning-like punches. One on one encounters between Atlas and Ron Simmons guarantees a brutal exchange of blows with someone being knocked out cold. Brawls with Barry Windham would surely increase attendance figures in arenas showcasing the two.

The thought of guiding "Mr USA's" career may even cause Diamond Dallas Page to think twice about lacing up his boots. He may very well want to return to managing. Tony Atlas has the name, the face and the record recognized by fans world wide. He could infuse some veteran blood into the WCW ranks and give viewers plenty to talk about. Yes, if Atlas and WCW get together the benefits for all concerned are mind boggling. It would truly be a terrific teaming! □

JIM CORNETTE

PHOTOS BY IAN SCHULTZ

During the course of his managerial career, Jim Cornette has been both loved and hated by wrestling fans. He seems to spark controversy the minute he opens his mouth and one constantly listens and watches for what he will do next. The man is totally unpredictable! However, regardless of the way he occasionally has conducted himself in the past, nobody can deny that Cornette is truly a gifted speaker and one of the most colorful and charismatic figures in the sport of professional wrestling today. Like fine wine, Cornette continues to get better and better with age. In a sport where musclebound giants seem to get all the limelight, it's refreshing to see someone like Cornette come out and steal some of the attention. It's also truly amazing how he can mesmerize an audience by just uttering a few words.

Jim Cornette used his interest in photography to enter the wrestling world. When he first started out, he worked as a photo-journalist for various wrestling publications covering the southern scene.

THE MOUTH THAT ROARS!

▽ Stan Lane says that Jim is number one!!!

His time as a ringside photographer allowed him to observe and learn from a number of different managers. He was astute and quietly absorbed all he needed to know, so when Cornette finally made his debut as a manager, he was more than ready.

Jim is best known for the time he spent with The Midnight Express in the NWA/WCW. It was in this promotion, by way of their national television shows, that fans across the country became familiar with Cornette. At first, many could not stand him. He was obnoxious and whiny and portrayed as a real Mama's boy. Many would flick off their television sets in disgust when he appeared, but slowly, Cornette began to win the angry masses over. After all; he was extremely intelligent, witty and on the ball. Even as a rulebreaking manager, he was one of the funniest people to hear, and he was very entertaining to watch. Cornette could made a preliminary match seem like a main event with his antics at ringside. He would stop at nothing in order to guarantee his men a win and fans began tuning in to see what he would do next. To lead his men to the top, Cornette was even willing to sacrifice his own health and safety for the good of his athletes. As a result, he has taken many beatings in the ring from angry wrestlers and has suffered great bodily harm. For example, who can forget the time he was forced off a scaffold by The Legion of Doom at Starcade '86?

If there ever truly was a jack of all trades in wrestling, it would have to be Jim Cornette. Cornette has managed, wrestled, commentated and promoted and has done all of this while never straying far from his trusty tennis racket. Cornette always brings a racket to ringside and often uses it against the opponents of his wrestlers.

Cornette's natural charisma really shines through when he steps behind the mike to serve as a color commentator. He is quite candid in his opinions and very humorous to hear. He adds excitement to any match, no matter how dull it may be. Jim Cornette is definitely one of the best color men in the business today. Fans of both the WCW and LPWA have enjoyed hearing his views on the respective shows. Cornette is too good of a broadcaster to be working for regional promotions. He belongs on national television so all fans can be treated to his talents.

Jim Cornette left WCW with Stan Lane because he was unhappy with the president at the time, Jim Herd. Never one to hold back his feelings, Cornette forwarded a black wreath after his departure to Jim Herd at the WCW offices to symbolize what he perceived to be the death of that promotion. The note attached let Herd know that Cornette felt he was destroying WCW. Since leaving, Jim has been traveling throughout the United States and trying to appear for as many different promotions as he can, so no fan feels cheated or left out. Now that Jim Herd has left WCW, there is talk that Cornette may make a comeback there soon. Jim Cornette is just what WCW needs to spice up their television shows and dull commentating. No matter what area he's used in, he can certainly contribute plenty to the overall quality of the cards presented.

In the Carolina area, Cornette also operates his own wrestling promotion called Smokey Mountain Wrestling. The promotion reportedly does very well for an independent organization and even has television coverage. Cornette has used his extensive knowledge of the sport of wrestling to create a promotion that both the fans and wrestlers can enjoy and he seems to be succeeding quite handily.

Jim Cornette lives a very busy life, and he would not want to have it any other way. He loves professional wrestling and wants to make a positive impact on it. Sometime soon we will probably see Cornette back on the national scene. The WWF or WCW will finally wake up and realize what an asset he is to any wrestling promotion. Many fans think that wrestlers are the only big drawing cards, but put Jim Cornette on any show and you are almost guaranteed of a near sell out since fans will flock to see this unique personality work the crowds and aggravate opposing wrestlers, all at the same time.

Jim Cornette is truly one of a kind. He has earned his place in wrestling history and his name will live on long after he leaves the sport. Before it is all said and done Jim Cornette may very well go down as the greatest manager in pro wrestling! □

PHANTOM of the ring

Eddie Gilbert has taken a new wife.

Welcome back to the deep, dark domain of WRESTLING EYE magazine's most controversial (and only) columnist . . . Now, let's get to the dirt . . . MADUSA MICELI most recently married "HOTSTUFF" EDDIE GILBERT. For all of you who didn't know, GILBERT was MISSY HYATT'S ex-husband. I understand that MISSY and MADUSA have recently exchanged heated word and have almost even almost punched each other out! Of course, MISSY'S current man is JASON HERVEY of the "Wonder Years" television series fame . . . BIG JOHN STUDD has been seen at various boxing events over the last few months. STUDD has no desire to don the boxing gloves but he is rather interested in promoting. JOHN has even been working with boxing czar, DON KING in Las Vegas . . . The wrestling world is mourning the death of BUZZ SAWYER aka BRUCE WOYAN. BUZZ was found dead by his girlfriend on the lawn of his home in Sacramento, California. The death was said to be drug related. BUZZ was an accomplished athlete. He was an outstanding amateur as well as professional wrestler. His most famous feuds were against TOMMY "WILDFIRE" RICH and RODDY PIPER when they all competed for Georgia Championship Wrestling. BUZZ SAWYER, dead at the age of thirty two . . . Many have commented on the outstanding matches between

JUSHIN LIGER and BRIAN PILLMAN. LIGER has also had some great matches in the States with RICHARD MORTON... HULK HOGAN may soon be seen on "The Simpsons" cartoon show. His next movie is supposedly titled "Ugh!" and I'm told that it's so bad it won't even reach movie theaters. Look for it at your local video store . . . One more word about THE ULTIMATE WARRIOR. Reports indicate that he has no desire to ever return to the wrestling ring. His interests are now directed towards bodybuilding. THE WARRIOR may even join JOE WEIDER'S bodybuilding group, an organization he competed in five years ago... JIMMY SNUKA, HERCULES, THE BARBARIAN and HAKU have all been seen on independent shows recently. You can also add JIM "THE ANVIL" NEIDHART to that list . . . Rumors abound that THE LEGION OF DOOM are about to sign a exclusive deal with Japan . . . By the way can someone tell me why SID JUSTICE needs DR. HARVEY WHIPPLEMAN as his manager. Personally, I hate this guy! . . . TATONKA is definitely not your typical American Indian considering his fluorescent red mohawk . . . BRUCE PRITCHARD aka BROTHER LOVE of WWF fame is now managing with the Global Wrestling Federation. His new ring moniker is THE EXPERT . . . By the way, kudos to the GWF for a very entertaining product. Considering the talent they have, every show is exciting . . . J.W. STORM aka JEFF WARNER of WCW fame has been wrestling house shows for the WWF . . . STING'S wife most recently gave birth to a seven pound, eight ounce baby boy, STEVEN JAMES BORDON, JR. Congrats!!! . . . GEORGE FOREMAN turned down the opportunity to referee the main event JUSTICE-HOGAN match at Wrestlemania . . . PAUL ROMA is now a professional boxer. He fought for BOB ARUM'S Top Rank Promotions in March . . . A battle royal that was recently held Memphis had quite a different twist. The stipulations were that the wrestlers involved rip each other's clothes off. The last one left standing with clothes on would be the winner. TONY ANTHONY won this particular spectacle. By the way what made this battle royal so interesting was the fact that it was co-ed (men and women)! . . . TERRI POWER is the new LPWA ladies champion. She upset LADY X in Minnesota to garner this victory. The LPWA is expanding their promotion. I understand that offices will be opening soon in Vancouver, B.C. and Tokyo, Japan . . . Message to the WWF: Since OWEN "THE ROCKET" HART is now a singles wrestler how about a match against his brother BRET? Hey, just asking! . . . WCW has plans of running monthly shows in various Northeast towns including Worcester, Philadelphia, Boston and The Meadowlands stadium in New Jersey. At least now the WWF now has some competition . . . That's it from my perch. See ya all next month!!! □

THE DEMISE

BY GIL EDWARDS

Unfortunately, in most instances all good things do come to an end. Throughout history, various individuals and their projects, that we as spectators and supporters accepted, have come in with a bang and concluded at times without a trace. The sad and certainly untimely execution of Joel Goodhart's Tri-States Wrestling Alliance remains a sore and opinionated subject.

Fans along the East Coast especially mourn the loss of the promotion that they cared for, as the organization in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania mushroomed into an international alternative to what the major leagues were dispensing. What went wrong, why the plunge?

It's never a pleasant picture when a business closes up operations, especially one that had built up the momentum with it's patrons like the TWA did. Sure, many people shared in the joy of the entire project but now the finger pointing continues as to why it went bust.

Dennis Coraluzzo, promoter of the New Jersey based World Wrestling Alliance and one-time supporter of Goodhart's endeavors claims greed is what ultimately caved in the walls on the TWA. "Joel alienated himself from every promotion in the region. People gave him money for services such as video tapes of his shows and tickets to the matches and didn't get what was bargained for. He thought that he was more important than the wrestlers. I have no remorse for him," Coraluzzo stated.

When looking back on the TWA's mega-shows in Pennsylvania Hall, complete with a cavalcade of stars including Terry Funk, Jerry Lawler, Rick Rude and The Original Sheik, there's no denying Goodhart was a master in generating publicity. He himself gained a pseudo cult following as did his promotion's style of taking the action out of the ring and into

Blood baths were the norm for each match presented. Goodhart, who walked around ringside in his tuxedo and sunglasses, was used to hearing the chants of "make Joel bleed". Besides the glut of bloody massacres up and down the TWA line-ups, which most neutral observers believe was a promotional overkill, accusations of out of control spending on talent were the nails that shut the coffin on TWA operations officially on January 18, 1992.

It's been reported that Goodhart lost a substantial amount of money putting on TWA shows when he began promoting in the late 1980's. In all fairness to Joel, who never claimed to be a Harvard M.B.A. graduate, he usually did a remarkable job of filling the arena. It's that high overhead rap that continuously haunted him.

"The bottom line of any business venture is how much you have left over after you finish playing the bills," Coraluzzo explained. "Joel just didn't have anything." Still, there were many positive effects of the TWA still being felt today. Goodhart's hard work brought about a new sense of importance to the independent promotions in America.

By tailoring his product to the wrestling fans in New Jersey Delaware and Pennsylvania, Joel proved a non-affiliated promotion could not only survive but succeed. Quite simply, he gave his audiences what they asked for. The Cactus Jack/Eddie Gilbert feud which gained international attention, mainly for the new level of bloody barbarianism distilled by the two, was in part responsible for Cactus Jack's returning to World Championship Wrestling in August 1991.

There's no denying Joel's innovative ways put his product in a class of its own. On March 2, 1991, Terry Funk and Jerry Lawler duked it out in a first ever fans participation lumberjack match. Fans in attendance had their names pulled out of a hat and the lucky entrants took their places surrounding ringside traditionally held by wrestlers, to persuade the participants back into the ring. You can bet that those lucky fans in attendance were glad to be at that TWA card.

Joel also combined his efforts with the Ringmasters Wrestling School, which local grappling great Larry Winters was trainer and hosted a weekly call-in show "Rasslin Radio" which aired on WIP-AM on Saturday mornings in Philadelphia. He also started a "Rasslin Fan Club" and let the two feed off each other to build up his promotional coffers.

Luncheons with wrestling greats making guest appearances proved to be another popular move. With all of WCW's television exposure nationwide, and with Goodhart having none, his shows were outdrawing theirs in Pennsylvania Hall. In the most energetic sense of the word, Joel was a hustler. Sadly, as it turned out his champagne taste on a beer budget caught up with him.

Many wrestling insiders label Joel's efforts as a noble ambition with lousy execution. Perhaps part of the demise of Goodhart in wrestling is that he may have been transfused with too much of that wild and whacky Memphis blood to know when to say no more. All the blood spilled on his four major shows annually and his non-stop World Wrestling Federation bashing turned many fans off, as well. Hey, only in Philly and through Goodhart's efforts could the popular Fantastics tag team be booed. Goodhart's relentless WWF bashing turned off wrestling fans of the Federation who may have once considered attending one of his shows. He also turned his radio show into a weekly commercial for the TWA, which certainly was his choice as purchaser of the air time, but he was getting caught up in a catch-22 situation. Familiar wrestlers at the time like Nikolai Volkoff, Mike Rotunda and Big John Studd who didn't normally attend his shows weren't used. Joel's business decisions based on his personal feelings put a strangle hold on him.

Owing up to knowing one's limits isn't always easy to accept. A person can try to have it all, but sacrifices are usually made. In Goodhart's case, he lost it all—lock, stock and barrel and that's just too bad. After attending the Winter Challenge card on March 2, 1991, this reporter declared the TWA bill was the most exciting set of matches witnessed in sixteen years. Of course, the sluggish U.S. economy didn't assist Joel's tireless efforts to keep his promotion afloat. Then it seemed that he had scored the greatest coup the sport had seen in decades. On January 25, 1992 former World Champion "Nature Boy" Buddy Rogers agreed to come out of retirement at age 72 to challenge then TWA champ "Nature Boy" Buddy Landell for the title. A week before match time the bottom fell out for the TWA. There were reports of Goodhart not returning phone calls from Rogers and others needing information concerning the show.

There was also an apparent agreement made with New Japan Wrestling Promotions that would send in top Oriental mat talent to the TWA and proposed shows promoted in Florida. Both deals, if they were indeed struck, collapsed as well.

Was the rise and fall of Joel Goodhart clearly a case of having too much, too fast? At this time, it's highly unlikely that the TWA will be heard from again, the puzzle remains too complex to pick up all the pieces. Still, sometimes being a contender is more advantageous than being a champion. □

Dear Wrestling Eye,

We read your editorial on the end of the Hogan era and all we can say is Hooray!! The Hulkster is nothing but an aging, over the hill wrestler who has seen better days. It's about time that he steps aside and lets some of the younger and more talented blood get a chance at the limelight.

Hogan is a has-been and we really can't understand why he's been hanging on for so long. He should have retired years ago. We believe that the 90's will be the decade of The Undertaker. Not only is the man gorgeous, he sure can wrestle as well. He adds a fresh perspective to the sport and personally, we love him!!

Goodbye Hogan, hello Undertaker! From now on you get our vote for best wrestler not only in the WWF but in the entire world as well!

Dear Wrestling Eye,

If you have any knowledge of where The Ultimate Warrior is, please tell us! We need to know! And if you are reading this, Warrior, please come back!

Like the rest of your warriors, I have been waiting for you. You made it through the pain, nightmares and heartbreak of 1991. Now 1992 is half over and you still haven't appeared. I know last year was terrible, but things can only get better. You are not a loser and I know you stand for the belief that its right to accept any and all challenges at the cost of losing everything. This alone make you the Ultimate Winner. Regardless of what others think, you are still the strongest in the universe.

Dear Editor,

Just thought I'd write and let you know that I found your March edition of WRESTLING EYE to be both interesting as well as entertaining.

I hope you will continue to enlighten the professional grappling enthusiasts as to what is going on both on the independent circuit as well as the so called "major leagues". Keep on keeping on!

I really enjoyed the color pin up of Miss Texas, I found this gorgeous lady to be a real knockout, bald head and all! Please do a story on her in the future.

Dear Wrestling Eye,

I have been following pro wrestling for seventeen years and I am a big fan of both the WWF and WCW. About the new kid in WCW, Marcus Bagwell, I know he will go far and I know that in time he could beat Steve Austin for the WCW television title.

Dear Wrestling Eye,

As far as I'm concerned the WWF made the right decision by getting the rid of the Ultimate Warrior. Now all they have to do is get rid of "the Macho Man" Randy Savage and Hulk Hogan and then we can have the real dream with match with Ric Flair against Sid Justice for the WWF title. That will truly be a match to see and I will be first on line to get my ticket.

Dear Wrestling Eye,

I am writing about the current tag team situation in the WWF. It has never been worse than it is now. The tag team champions, Ted DiBiase and IRS are two good singles wrestlers but I don't know how they can do as a team.

There isn't much competition for the champs. The Legion of Doom have vanished from the WWF. The New Foundation are finished due to the departure of Jim Neidhart. The Nasty Boys and The Beverly Brothers probably won't get any shots since they are rulebreakers. The Bushwackers are just a couple of comedians with no talent. Jim Duggan and Sgt. Slaughter are two has-beens and don't have a chance. Who does this leave?

What ever happened to those exciting tag teams in the WWF? There was The British Bulldogs, Demolition, The Can-Am Connection, The Killer Bees, The Rougeaus, The Dream Team, Strike Force and many more.

I hope Vince McMahon reads this letter and shakes ups the tag team competition in the WWF.

Dear Wrestling Eye,

Here in Holland we have no wrestling on television at all. We used to have some shows but they just stopped broadcasting them. Now, the only way to know what's going on in the wrestling world is to read your fine magazine. Still, I wish I could see the live action. I read all about the independents and the top wrestlers but I never get to see them. My favorites are Mr. Perfect, Bret Hart, The Undertakers, The Steiners, Kevin Sullivan, Jake Roberts and D.C. Drake.

So, greetings from Holland. Keep up the great work, WRESTLING EYE!

Dear Wrestling Eye,

I live in Hamburg, Pa. I have been an avid wrestling fan for over twenty years. Until recently, Hamburg was a dead area for wrestling. Ten years ago I remember attending the WWF cards at the Hamburg Fieldhouse and I saw some of the greats. Now, the IWA, a local promotion is in the Hamburg Fieldhouse each month with 1,000 or more people in attendance. I've seen stars like Nikolai Volkoff and Tony Atlas compete. The IWA has really put my home town back on the map. Could you give me any other info on this fine promotion?

RUSTEE THOMAS VS HEIDI LEE MORGAN

Rustee Thomas has mega strength.

BY DON LAIBLE

You didn't expect them to strive for a peaceful compromise to settle their differences, did you? This is all out war and Heidi Lee Morgan and her enemy, Rustee "The Foxx" Thomas have both declared they will accept victory only as the outcome.

You bet the situation between two of professional wrestling's top performers is heating up. Everyone, anywhere, including referees are fair game and the two will stop at nothing in order to settle their bitter feud. Sure, there have been knock-down, drag-out brawls among the women's ranks over the past few years but none rivals the violence dispensed by Morgan and "The Foxx". At one time both women were friends and trained together, but that easy relationship is a thing of the past. With the world women's championship the ultimate professional goal of both, nothing is being held back by either combatant.

When these two step into a wrestling ring they are anything but ladies. Let's put their feelings into proper perspective. There is hate and then there is all out destruction. The latter most accurately sums up how they feel towards each other. It doesn't take much coaxing to conclude that Morgan and Thomas seem now to exist in their craft for the sole purpose of publicly humiliating and annihilating one another. The ill-will should have never been allowed to brew. Fan favorite Heidi Lee was provoked by "The Foxx" relentlessly and you can only be expected to turn your cheek so many times until the aggression must be met head on.

Thomas, without showing the slightest hint of humility demands to be addressed as "The Foxx". She will also inform you that she is currently listed in the top rankings of leading women's wrestling promotions. The Ladies Professional Wrestling Association, and the Virginia Wrestling Association, for which she wears the championship belt are among the organizations hounding her for bookings.

It must be greed. "The Foxx" has commented she will never be professionally satisfied being in possession of but a single title belt. Accomplished pros like Peggy Lee Leather, Bambi and Heidi Lee Morgan are among the many she has had to deal with to rise up in the rankings. As self-centered as she portrays herself to be in the ring, make no mistake that "The Foxx" is always forceful, determined and totally in control. It's obvious that her body is always a distraction to the male ringside faithful but she never lets this fact overshadow her wrestling savvy. Without question, Rustee Thomas has proven to be as dangerous as she is attractive.

It's strange that the 5'6" 130 pound veteran of Richmond, Virginia has adopted the paranoid attitude that all female wrestlers, particularly Morgan is out to get her because there has been no provocation on anyone's part. The "do unto others before they do onto you" logic is how "The Foxx's" trouble began in the first place with Heidi Lee Morgan.

Let's go back to "The Foxx's" rookie year of 1989. On November 17 of that year in Richmond, she went face-to-face with Morgan on a VWA bill. During that same week she was wrestling Morgan, she also had singles encounters against Luna Vachon, daughter of wrestling legend Paul "Butcher" Vachon and the always energetic, high flying Katy Kincaid. Instead of approaching the match with Morgan as a proud pro, "The Foxx" resorted to terrorist levels. The VWA champ went from being a hero to a hated competitor because of this. Those who have known her for several years attribute her attitude change to that of letting pressures from promoters and fellow wrestlers get the best of her. Morgan just happened to be in the wrong place at the wrong time.

Heidi Lee didn't even have an opportunity to fully step through the ring ropes before she was victimized with an ambush attack. "The Foxx" pulled Heidi's ring jacket over her head and proceeded to pound repeatedly and mercilessly forearm smashes on her challenger's back. When the referee attempted to stop the scuffle, "The Foxx" unloaded a right fist to his jaw and sent him down on his back. "The Foxx" was disqualified and Morgan's hand was raised in victory. Little did anyone realize at that time, it would be just the beginning of a bitter rivalry between the two determined athletes.

"After a couple of years of chasing after each other, most people would have thought that the problems existing between Rustee and Heidi would have been patched up by now," VWA President, David Leehy said. "Other professional interests and injuries that have come along haven't changed their minds about the ugly situation. They've even increased the territory in which they are traveling in order for promoters to book them opposite each other. The world's the limit for these two!"

Keeping the two wrestlers apart at this stage of their feud could possibly be the worst route for promoters to take. Better yet, a strong case can be made to sign "The Foxx" and Morgan to a lumberjack match, which would ensure neither from running away from ringside. In theory a match of this nature would allow them to finish up their battle so they can get on with their careers in separate directions.

Perhaps the VWA champ had the idea that her staunch competitor would foolishly give up the challenge. Boy, was she wrong! After being in the wrestling game for seven years, Morgan has been through it all, cage matches, battle royals and street fights, yet the fire of hatred has never burned so brightly like it does for "The Foxx". Oddly enough the VWA title has not been the main priority of Morgan in pursuing the champ. At this time revenge is the only motivator. During a match between the two in Atlantic City, New Jersey, Heidi Lee had her back to her challenger while signing autographs. As predicted, all mayhem broke loose. Rustee Thomas shows no concern for the fans in attendance when she proceeded to throw her foe to the ground. She then swiped the microphone from the ring announcer's hand and slapped it across Morgan's head. In a matter of seconds Morgan's beautiful blonde hair turned crimson due to a nasty gash she sustained on her forehead.

Orga Stalinka, a frequent tag team partner of Morgan's rushed to the ring in attempts to calm the atmosphere. "The Foxx" quickly assessed the situation and hurled two chairs at the big Russian to avoid any further confrontation.

"The fans are getting their monies worth in witnessing this feud but if something isn't done soon to bring it to a conclusion, I'm afraid a serious or permanent injury is going to occur to both of them," former World Champion Misty Blue said. With Misty in her corner, Morgan hopes to eventually send her red headed nemesis back to the showers for good.

In a way, Heidi Lee is caught between a rock and a hard place. What gets the most undivided attention from her career, "The Foxx" or tag competition? The answer hasn't turned out to be as simple as it may seem. The VWA champ has no respect for right and wrong in conducting business inside the ring and Morgan is determined to teach her some.

Support of the wrestling public and faith in her abilities should allow for Morgan to prevail in this private mat war, but at what price? The next time a fellow grappling fan declares Roddy Piper or Cactus Jack to be uncontrollable and exciting, simply begin explaining the happenings between these two female superstars. □
